Columbia Housing Development Corporation Offers Homes for Sale

The Columbia Housing Development Corporation has several properties in the Columbia Metropolitan Area for sale. Homes range from $88,000 to $179,000 in price and are compatible with any lifestyle.

About Columbia Housing Development Corporation

The Columbia Housing Development Corporation (CHDC) was created in November 1980 as an affiliate of the City of Columbia. A non-profit organization and IRS designated 501(c) (3), its mission is to provide affordable housing opportunities and assist with the redevelopment of City of Columbia neighborhoods.

For over 30 years, CHDC has worked in many neighborhoods by encouraging community collaboration and making a difference through providing new and rehabilitated housing. Many families with varying incomes have realized homeownership opportunities as a result of CHDC's efforts.

Some of the neighborhoods impacted are Edgewood, Melrose Heights, Lyon Street, MLK and Historic Waverly. In fact, the Historic Waverly Community was recognized nationally in 2010 as the Neighborhood Revitalization Winner for its Community-Police Partnership.

CHDC is very interested in talking with and qualifying individuals and families who already know what City living is all about or perhaps with individuals or families who have always wanted to live in the City, but have put off the first step toward making it a reality.
